Fireworks Committee Lets Contract and Chairman Rudolph Describes the Evening's Programme-Atlanta Will Pay Expenses of State Troops and School Cadets-Other Facts.

M. I. Weller yesterday submitted to Chairman Stellwagen the membership of the committee on public comfort, and it was approved by him. The committee contains the names of nearly 500 prominent residents of Washington, all of whom will be more or less directly concerned in looking out for the comfort and convenience of the crowds of visitors which will pour into Washington the first

The spectacular event of the programme The spectacular event of the programme will be a "pattle in the skles," an immense set piece. This will be the only set piece outside of the fire portraits of president Taff and Vice President Sher-President Taft and Vice President Sherman. The scene shows a typical, up-todate city, with its towers and lofty buildings. An airship is seen to pass near the city followed by smaller aerial craft. They turn and tack, and are met by the opposing aerial fleet. A terrific encounter ensues, the ships burn and explode, and crumble. In the meantime other airships. not directly engaged in the aerial battle, have been dropping high explosives upon the doomed city. The towers and tall buildings crumble and burn and fall until all are utterly destroyed.

EARTHQUAKE RECORDED.

The seismograph at the Weather Bureau recorded another earthquake early yesterday morning, and scientists are wondering if another series of terrestrial shivera is due.

The record made by the instrument is faint, and the officials who watch the seismograph conclude that the shake was a long way from Washington.

This is the first quake recorded for nearly two weeks. From December 28, the date of the Messing disaster, until January 22, shocks were of almost daily occurrence, and frequently happened every few hours.

In view of the great number of disturbances reported within the last few weeks, some persons are of the opinion that volcanic and seismic manifestations are on the increase. Scientists here do not agree with this belief, however. "We are merely hearing more about them than formerly," said Prof. Charles Marvin, chief of the instrument division of the Weather Bureau. "It is also likely the shocks just happen to strike in more densely populated places. Means of communication are also better than they used to be, and, whereas formerly a tremor that dld not kill a number of persons would merely shakes down a brick wall, without hurting any one, is now made the subject of widespread
